A black and white photograph of a middle-aged man with a receding hairline, smiling broadly. He is wearing a dark suit jacket, a white shirt, and a dark tie. In the background, the Sydney Opera House is visible, still under construction, with its iconic sail-like roof structure partially completed. Scaffolding and construction cranes are visible around the building. The image is framed by a thin red border.

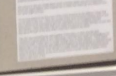

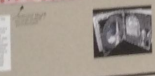

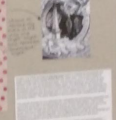

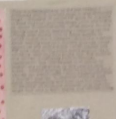

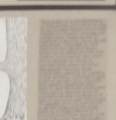

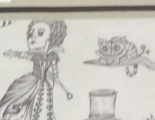

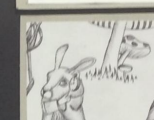

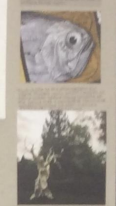

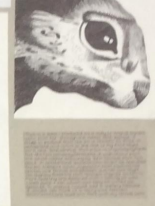

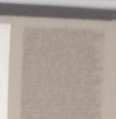

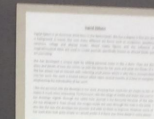

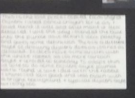

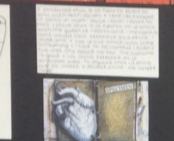

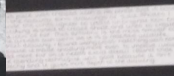

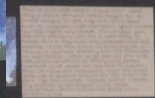

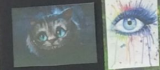

A black and white photograph of a sailboat on the water. The boat is positioned in the lower half of the frame, with its sails partially visible. The foreground is dominated by a dark, textured, and somewhat abstract shape that resembles a large rock or a piece of driftwood. The background is a bright, overexposed sky and water surface.

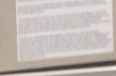

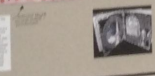

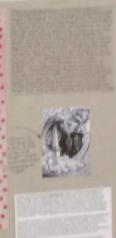

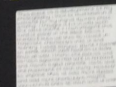

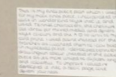

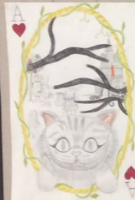

Art and Photography are powerful forms of communication.
